

Major Daniel F. Rendleman is the outgoing Brigade Judge Advocate at 12th Combat Aviation Brigade and Officer-in-Charge of the Ansbach Law Center. Dan joined the Army in 2007 and, prior to entering the Law, served as an Army aviator with the 101st Airborne Division. A 2017 graduate of Yale Law School, he served as trial counsel for I Corps at Joint Base Lewis-McChord. He is now headed back to Fort Campbell to serve as Senior Defense Counsel. Dan, his wife, Katy, and their six children have enjoyed serving in Europe and traveling the Old World, but are looking forward to being back. Dan is a graduate of Georgetown University and a once and future resident of Southern Illinois. His views are obviously his own.

